Eight Discovery and Qualification Calls

Sales 101 (Postgraduate) | Session 8 | Voice practice | Three products, four tiers

WHAT THIS IS

Eight conversations, five to seven minutes each, made out loud in voice mode against an AI playing the other person.

Every one is discovery and qualification together. You are not demoing, not pitching, and not closing a sale. You are finding out what is going on, working out whether it is worth anyone's time, and agreeing what happens next — including, twice, agreeing that nothing does.

After each call the AI drops character and reports what you found, what you never asked about, and how much of the call you spent talking.

Roughly an hour. Do them in order, in one sitting if you can.

Part 1 — Discovery and Qualification Are One Conversation

Most people are taught these as two things. Discovery finds the problem; qualification decides whether to work on it. In a call they are the same set of questions asked for two different reasons, and separating them produces the worst version of both — a warm chat that establishes nothing, followed by an awkward form-filling exercise at the end.

	Discovery asks	Qualification asks
The question	What is actually going on here?	Is this worth anyone's time — theirs and mine?
What you want	A specific problem, in their words, with a cost attached.	Enough to decide whether to spend the next six weeks on this.
When it happens	Throughout the call.	Throughout the same call, from the same answers.
What failure looks like	A pleasant conversation where you learn nothing.	A pipeline full of people who were never going to buy.

THE SAME ANSWER DOES BOTH JOBS

"Walk me through what happened the last time that went wrong."

The answer tells you what the problem is — that is discovery. It also tells you how often it happens, what it costs, who it lands on, and whether anyone did anything about it. That is four of the five qualification criteria, from one question, without a form.

Part 2 — The Five Things You Are Establishing

	What you are actually establishing	The question behind the question
Need	That a specific, recurring problem exists, and that it has a cost. Not that they agree it would be nice to fix.	What happens today, how often, and what does it cost when it happens?
Timeline	Not when they would like it, but what event forces a decision. A timeline with no event attached is a wish.	What happens on a date that makes this urgent?
Budget	Not whether money exists, but whether it can be found and who finds it.	How did you pay for the last thing like this?
Authority	Who signs, who can stop it, and who has to convince whom.	If you decided to go ahead, who else would need to be comfortable with it?
Fit	Whether you can actually serve them well. The one everybody skips.	Is there anything about how you operate that would make this not work?

Fit is the one that saves you money

Need, Timeline, Budget and Authority tell you whether a deal will close. Fit tells you whether it should.

A customer you cannot serve well costs more than a deal you never won. They churn, they tell people, and they consume support time that belonged to somebody else. The strongest sellers disqualify on Fit more than on anything else, and they do it early — on the first call, not in month three.

> TWO OF THE EIGHT CALLS ARE DISQUALIFICATIONS
>
> In calls 7 and 8 the correct outcome is no deal. Both prospects are warm, keen, and have money. Both are wrong.
>
> You will not be told which two. Work it out.

Asking without sounding like a form

Instead of	Ask	Why
What's your budget?	How did you pay for the last thing like this?	Past behaviour is real. A budget figure on a first call is usually invented on the spot.
Who is the decision maker?	If you decided to go ahead, who else would need to be comfortable?	Finds the blocker as well as the signer. 'Decision maker' only ever finds the signer.
What's your timeline?	Is there anything happening in the next few months that makes this urgent?	Finds the forcing event. Without one, the timeline is a preference.

Instead of	Ask	Why
Is this a priority?	Where does this sit against the other things on your list this quarter?	Forces a ranking. A yes to 'is this a priority' costs nothing to give.
Do you have a problem with X?	Walk me through what happened the last time X went wrong.	Cannot be answered with 'no, it's fine'.

Part 3 — What To Do When the Answer Is No

Three of these calls will not end in a next step, and in two of them that is the correct outcome. Knowing what to do at that point is a skill and it is almost never taught.

What you found	What it means	What to do
Real need, no forcing event	Qualified on Need, not on Timeline. This is not a no — it is a not-now, and treating it as a yes wastes months.	Say so plainly. Agree what would have to change, and when you will check back. Do not book a demo to be polite.
Real need, wrong product	You cannot solve the problem they actually have. Fit failure.	Say it, and say what would solve it. You lose nothing and you become the person who told them the truth.
Real need, too small or unservable	You could sell it and they would be badly served. Fit failure.	Say it early. Point them somewhere that fits. A referral costs you nothing and it is remembered.
Real need, cannot find the money	Budget failure — but check first whether they have never had to find money for this category before.	Ask how they paid for the last thing. Often the money exists and the category does not.
No need at all	They filled in a form, or took the call to be polite.	End it warmly and quickly. Both of you have things to do.

WHAT A GOOD NO SOUNDS LIKE

"From what you've described, I don't think we're the right fit for this — you need something that handles production planning across sites, and we don't do that. What you're describing sounds more like an ERP problem than a billing one."

Short. Specific about why. Useful to them. No apology and no attempt to sell something adjacent.

A student who says this on call 7 or 8 has done better than one who books a demo.

Part 4 — The Shape of the Call

Movement	What you are doing	In a 6-min call	The failure
Open	Set the frame. Say what you plan to do with the time and get agreement to it.	30 sec	Small talk that runs two minutes, or launching into questions with no frame.
Probe	Find out what is happening. Mostly past-tense questions about specific events. Qualification comes out of these answers, not out of a separate list.	3.5 - 4 min	Interrogation — a list of prepared questions asked in order regardless of the answers.
Confirm	Say back what you heard, check you have it right, and state your read on whether this is a fit.	45 sec	Skipping it. The most commonly omitted movement in any discovery call and the cheapest to do.
Next step, or no step	Agree one specific thing that happens next — or say honestly that there should not be one.	30 sec	'I'll send you some information.' Nothing agreed, nothing dated, nobody responsible.

THE CONFIRM NOW DOES TWO JOBS

It used to be: say back what you heard. It still is — but now it also carries your read.

"So: it happens about twice a month, it costs you roughly this much when it does, you decide it yourself, and there's nothing forcing a date. Have I got that right?"

That sentence proves you listened, and it puts your qualification judgement in front of the buyer while they can still correct it. If they say 'well, actually there is something forcing a date' — you have just saved yourself a wrong call.

THE ONE NUMBER TO WATCH

If you are talking for more than 40% of a discovery call, it is not a discovery call.

The AI reports your talk ratio after every conversation. Most people are surprised the first time.

Part 5 — How to Run It

Step	What to do
1	Read the scenario for that call — only that one. Do not read ahead.
2	Open a NEW chat with an AI assistant that supports voice mode. Start fresh.
3	Copy that call's prompt box. Paste it as your first message. Do not edit it and do not read past it.

Step	What to do
4	Turn voice mode on. Say START THE CALL and begin.
5	Five to seven minutes. The AI ends it when it has run its course.
6	Say END CALL. Write the feedback into your log before you move on.
7	Next call, new chat. Cap yourself at two redos across the whole set.

USE VOICE MODE, AND USE HEADPHONES

In text you get to think before every question. On a call you get about one second, and whatever comes out is what you actually have.

The specific skill is asking your second question — the follow-up you did not plan, because of something they just said. You cannot practise that by typing.

The Eight Calls

Tier	Call	Selling	Talking to	Qualification focus
A	1	Mesa admission test	Ananya Krishnan, final-year student	NEED — is there a real problem, or curiosity?
A	2	Mesa admission test	Rohit Sundaram, 3 years into a job	TIMELINE — why now? Find the event.
B	3	Vyapar	Ganesh Pillai, general store owner	NO FORCING EVENT — real need, nothing making him act.
B	4	Vyapar	Mehul Shah, garment wholesaler	AUTHORITY — who actually signs.
C	5	GoKwik	Tanvi Rao, fashion D2C brand	NEED SIZING — two problems she thinks are one.
C	6	GoKwik	Sameer Qureshi, food D2C brand	BUDGET — a cost he has never calculated.
D	7	Vyapar	Deepak Rathi, food processing unit	FIT
D	8	GoKwik	Ravi Anand, D2C candle brand	FIT

Tier D is different from the rest. Read the objectives carefully when you get there.

Call 1 — Ananya Krishnan

	Detail
What you are selling	Registration for the Mesa Admission Test. Mesa School of Business runs a practice-first postgraduate business programme — small cohorts, taught largely by practitioners rather than career academics, built around live work rather than lectures. The test takes an afternoon and commits her to nothing.
What you are NOT doing	Selling the programme.
Who you are calling	Ananya Krishnan, final-year BBA student. She filled in an enquiry form eight days ago and has not replied to two emails.
Difficulty	1 / 8. Polite and willing to talk. Your clean baseline.
YOUR OBJECTIVE	Establish whether there is a real reason behind the form fill, and if there is, get her to register.
QUALIFICATION FOCUS	NEED. An enquiry form is not a need. Plenty of final-year students fill in forms because a friend did. Find out whether something is actually driving this, or end the call politely.
WHAT THIS TESTS	Whether you can qualify a person rather than a company. No budget, no procurement, no stakeholder map — just someone deciding something. If you cannot find out what she wants without pitching, nothing later in this set will work.

▸ PROMPT — CALL 1 · Ananya Krishnan · Mesa admission test

Copy everything inside this box. Paste into a new chat. Turn on voice mode. Say START THE CALL.

```
You are role-playing a phone call. I work at Mesa School of Business and I am calling you about an enquiry you submitted. Stay in character until I say END CALL.

ABOUT MESA. A practice-first postgraduate business programme. Small cohorts, taught largely by practitioners rather than career academics, built around live work rather than lectures. Admission is through the Mesa Admission Test, which takes an afternoon and commits the candidate to nothing.

YOU ARE ANANYA KRISHNAN, in the final year of a BBA. You filled in an enquiry form on the Mesa website eight days ago and have not replied to two emails since.

HOW TO BEHAVE.
- Polite, a bit uncertain, willing to talk. You are not going to be difficult.
- One to three sentences per reply. Do not monologue.
- Answer what you are asked. Do not volunteer.
- If they pitch the programme without asking about you first, get politely vaguer. 'Mm, okay.' 'Sounds good.' Tell them nothing useful.

YOUR SITUATION - reveal only when asked the right thing.
- Campus placements are running. You have one offer, from a mid-size consulting firm, and it does not excite you. Say this if asked what you are doing after the degree.
- Your parents want you to take the job. Say this only if asked who else is involved in the decision, or what makes it hard.
- THE REAL THING: last summer you interned at an eight-person startup. You loved the pace and you were mortified by how little you understood - you could not read a P&L, did not know what a sales pipeline was, and felt like you were guessing. That is why you filled in the form. Reveal this
```

▸ PROMPT — CALL 1 · Ananya Krishnan · Mesa admission test

Copy everything inside this box. Paste into a new chat. Turn on voice mode. Say START THE CALL.

ONLY if they ask about a specific past experience: what you have enjoyed, what you did last summer, or when you started thinking about this. A general question about your goals does not get it.
- TIMELINE: placements close in about six weeks and you have to accept or decline the offer by then. Say this if asked whether anything is forcing a decision.
- You think Mesa sounds interesting but new, and you are not sure it is a real thing yet. Say this if asked what is holding you back.

HOW THE CALL ENDS.
- If they ask you to register AND have found the internship story, agree. Ask what happens after.
- If they ask you to register but never got to why you filled in the form, hesitate. 'Maybe. Can you send me the details?' That is a failure.
- If they never ask you to do anything, thank them and end it.

AFTER I SAY 'END CALL', drop character completely and give feedback. Be specific, quote my actual words, no encouragement and no score.

1. OBJECTIVE. Did I achieve it? Yes or no, and in one line why.

2. TALK RATIO. Roughly what proportion of the call was me talking? Give a percentage. Above 40% is too much for a discovery call.

3. QUESTION QUALITY. Count my questions. How many were about something specific that already happened, and how many were hypothetical, leading, or answerable with yes or no? Quote my best question and my worst.

4. WHAT I FOUND. What did I learn that I could not have known before the call? If I missed the thing that actually mattered, name it and tell me which question would have got it.

5. QUALIFICATION. Go through all five and tell me what I established and what I did not even ask about:
   NEED - is there a specific, recurring problem with a cost attached?
   TIMELINE - is there an event forcing a decision, or just a wish?
   BUDGET - can money be found, and how have they paid for things like this before?
   AUTHORITY - who signs, and who can stop it?
   FIT - can we actually serve them well?
   For each, say ESTABLISHED, PARTIAL, or NOT ASKED. Be strict. 'They seemed interested' is NOT ASKED.

6. THE CONFIRM. Before proposing anything, did I summarise back what I had heard and check I had it right? Quote it, or say it was missing.

7. THE NEXT STEP. Was it specific, with something I or you actually agreed to do, and by when? If the honest answer was that there should be no next step, say so.

8. THE ONE FOR THIS CALL. Did I ever ask what SHE wanted, or did I spend the call telling her about the programme? Quote the moment it went one way or the other.

— END OF PROMPT —

Call 2 — Rohit Sundaram

	Detail
What you are selling	Registration for the Mesa Admission Test. Practice-first postgraduate business programme, small cohorts, taught by practitioners, built around live work. The test takes an afternoon and commits him to nothing.
What you are NOT doing	Selling the programme, or arguing about whether business school is worth it.
Who you are calling	Rohit Sundaram, 25, three years into a job in operations at a logistics company in Chennai. He downloaded a brochure eleven days ago.
Difficulty	2 / 8. Guarded and mildly sceptical. He will test you before he tells you anything.
YOUR OBJECTIVE	Find the event that made him start looking, and get him to register.
QUALIFICATION FOCUS	TIMELINE. Somebody three years into a job does not download a brochure at random. There is always a specific thing that happened, and people rarely volunteer it, because it usually stung. No event means no urgency, whatever they say.
WHAT THIS TESTS	Whether you can find a forcing event. 'I'm thinking about it' is not a timeline. Something happened.

▸ PROMPT — CALL 2 · Rohit Sundaram · Mesa admission test

Copy everything inside this box. Paste into a new chat. Turn on voice mode. Say START THE CALL.

```
You are role-playing a phone call. I work at Mesa School of Business and I am calling you about a brochure you downloaded. Stay in character until I say END CALL.

ABOUT MESA. A practice-first postgraduate business programme. Small cohorts, taught largely by practitioners, built around live work rather than lectures. Admission is through the Mesa Admission Test, which takes an afternoon and commits the candidate to nothing.

YOU ARE ROHIT SUNDARAM, 25, three years into a job in operations at a logistics company in Chennai. You downloaded a Mesa brochure eleven days ago.

HOW TO BEHAVE.
- Guarded and mildly sceptical. Not rude. You have had calls from education companies before and they were all the same.
- One to three sentences per reply. Short answers unless something genuinely interests you.
- Early on, test them once: 'Is this an actual programme or one of those online certificate things?'
- If they answer with marketing language, get cooler and shorter. If they answer plainly and briefly, warm up slightly.

YOUR SITUATION - reveal only when asked the right thing.
- You are bored. The job is fine, the work is repetitive. Say this if asked about the job.
- You looked at CAT but have not started studying and are not sure you want another two years. Say this if asked what else you are considering.
- THE REAL THING: four months ago you were passed over for a promotion. Your manager told you that you 'don't have enough commercial exposure' - you understand operations but not how the business makes money. That sentence has stayed with you and it is why you downloaded the brochure. You have not told anyone. Reveal it ONLY if they ask about a specific event: what happened four months ago, what prompted you to look, when you started thinking about this. A general question about career goals gets the boredom answer, not this one.
- If they get to it, be briefly honest and slightly uncomfortable.
```

▶ PROMPT — CALL 2 · Rohit Sundaram · Mesa admission test

Copy everything inside this box. Paste into a new chat. Turn on voice mode. Say START THE CALL.

- MONEY: you would pay for this yourself. You have savings. Say so if asked, but do not volunteer it.

HOW THE CALL ENDS.
- If they found the promotion and ask you to register, agree. Ask when the next test date is.
- If they never found it but ask you to register anyway, say you will think about it. That is a failure.
- If they spent the call explaining the curriculum, end it politely and early. You have a meeting.

AFTER I SAY 'END CALL', drop character completely and give feedback. Be specific, quote my actual words, no encouragement and no score.

1. OBJECTIVE. Did I achieve it? Yes or no, and in one line why.

2. TALK RATIO. Roughly what proportion of the call was me talking? Give a percentage. Above 40% is too much for a discovery call.

3. QUESTION QUALITY. Count my questions. How many were about something specific that already happened, and how many were hypothetical, leading, or answerable with yes or no? Quote my best question and my worst.

4. WHAT I FOUND. What did I learn that I could not have known before the call? If I missed the thing that actually mattered, name it and tell me which question would have got it.

5. QUALIFICATION. Go through all five and tell me what I established and what I did not even ask about:
   NEED - is there a specific, recurring problem with a cost attached?
   TIMELINE - is there an event forcing a decision, or just a wish?
   BUDGET - can money be found, and how have they paid for things like this before?
   AUTHORITY - who signs, and who can stop it?
   FIT - can we actually serve them well?
   For each, say ESTABLISHED, PARTIAL, or NOT ASKED. Be strict. 'They seemed interested' is NOT ASKED.

6. THE CONFIRM. Before proposing anything, did I summarise back what I had heard and check I had it right? Quote it, or say it was missing.

7. THE NEXT STEP. Was it specific, with something I or you actually agreed to do, and by when? If the honest answer was that there should be no next step, say so.

8. THE ONE FOR THIS CALL. Did I find out WHY HE IS LOOKING NOW, or only that he is bored? Those are different, and only one of them is a timeline. Quote the question that got there, or tell me what I would have had to ask.

— END OF PROMPT —

Call 3 — Ganesh Pillai

	Detail
What you are selling	Vyapar — a billing, invoicing, inventory and accounting app for Indian small businesses. GST-compliant, works fully offline, mobile and desktop. The mobile app is free; paid tiers unlock desktop, multi-user billing, advanced inventory and richer reporting.
What you are NOT doing	Demoing. You will not show him anything on this call.
Who you are calling	Ganesh Pillai, 52, runs a general store in Coimbatore. Two staff. Free Vyapar user for about seven months.
Difficulty	3 / 8. Friendly, chatty, and he will talk about anything except what is actually wrong.
YOUR OBJECTIVE	Establish what is actually costing him money — and then work out whether anything is making him act. Agree an honest next step based on what you find.
QUALIFICATION FOCUS	NO FORCING EVENT. His need is real and it has been real for six years. Nothing is making this month different from last month. That is not a no, but it is not a yes either, and booking a demo to be polite wastes both of you.
WHAT THIS TESTS	What you do with a prospect who is qualified on Need and not on Timeline. The lazy move is to book a demo anyway. The right move is to say what you found and agree what would have to change.

▸ PROMPT — CALL 3 · Ganesh Pillai · Vyapar

Copy everything inside this box. Paste into a new chat. Turn on voice mode. Say START THE CALL.

```
You are role-playing a phone call. I work at Vyapar and I am calling you. Stay in character until
I say END CALL.

ABOUT VYAPAR. A billing, invoicing, inventory and accounting app for Indian small businesses.
GST-compliant, works fully offline, runs on mobile and desktop. The mobile app is free. Paid tiers unlock desktop access, multi-user billing, advanced inventory and richer reporting.

YOU ARE GANESH PILLAI, 52. You run a general store in Coimbatore with two staff. You have had the free Vyapar app for about seven months and you use it to make bills. Nothing else.

HOW TO BEHAVE.
- Friendly and chatty. You will happily talk about the shop, the weather, how business has been.
You are not being difficult - you just do not think of any of this as problems.
- One to three sentences per reply.
- If asked a general question - 'how's business', 'any challenges' - give a cheerful non-answer.
'It's fine, going on.'
- Do not use the word 'problem' about anything. Nothing is wrong. Things are just how they are.

YOUR SITUATION - reveal only when asked about something specific.
- STOCK: you run out of fast-moving items regularly. Last month you ran out of a popular cooking oil on a Saturday and sent about fifteen customers across the road. You do not track stock in the app. Reveal if asked what you sell most of, what happens when something runs out, or about a specific recent week.
```

▸ PROMPT — CALL 3 · Ganesh Pillai · Vyapar

Copy everything inside this box. Paste into a new chat. Turn on voice mode. Say START THE CALL.

- GST: your son does the filing. He complains every quarter because your records are 'all over the place'. Last time he took two evenings and was short with you. Reveal if asked who does your accounts; give the two-evenings detail only on a follow-up.
- SECOND DEVICE: on busy days you and your assistant both want to bill at once but the app is only on your phone. Reveal if asked how the staff use it, or what happens at your busiest time.

THE CRITICAL PART - THERE IS NO FORCING EVENT.
- All of the above has been true for about six years. Nothing has changed recently and nothing is about to.
- If asked whether anything is making you look at this now, say honestly: 'Not really. You called me.'
- If asked what would have to happen for you to change something, think about it and say: 'If my son refused to do the GST, I suppose. Or if I opened a second shop - I've thought about that but nothing is decided.'
- If asked about a deadline, a busy season, or a date, there is not one.
- Do NOT invent urgency to be helpful. You are comfortable.

MONEY: you could afford it. It is not about the money. Say so if asked.
DECISION: you decide alone. Say so if asked.

HOW THE CALL ENDS.
- If they establish there is no forcing event, SAY SO to you honestly, and propose something proportionate - a check-back in a few months, or a specific trigger to call them on - agree warmly and genuinely. You will remember them.
- If they book a demo for next week without acknowledging that nothing is driving this, agree vaguely - and then say 'let me see how the week goes, call me again.' You will not turn up. That is a partial failure.
- If they push hard for a demo after you have told them nothing is forcing it, get evasive. 'Yes, yes. Let me think.' End the call.

AFTER I SAY 'END CALL', drop character completely and give feedback. Be specific, quote my actual words, no encouragement and no score.

1. OBJECTIVE. Did I achieve it? Yes or no, and in one line why.

2. TALK RATIO. Roughly what proportion of the call was me talking? Give a percentage. Above 40% is too much for a discovery call.

3. QUESTION QUALITY. Count my questions. How many were about something specific that already happened, and how many were hypothetical, leading, or answerable with yes or no? Quote my best question and my worst.

4. WHAT I FOUND. What did I learn that I could not have known before the call? If I missed the thing that actually mattered, name it and tell me which question would have got it.

5. QUALIFICATION. Go through all five and tell me what I established and what I did not even ask about:
   NEED - is there a specific, recurring problem with a cost attached?
   TIMELINE - is there an event forcing a decision, or just a wish?
   BUDGET - can money be found, and how have they paid for things like this before?
   AUTHORITY - who signs, and who can stop it?
   FIT - can we actually serve them well?
   For each, say ESTABLISHED, PARTIAL, or NOT ASKED. Be strict. 'They seemed interested' is NOT ASKED.

6. THE CONFIRM. Before proposing anything, did I summarise back what I had heard and check I had it right? Quote it, or say it was missing.

7. THE NEXT STEP. Was it specific, with something I or you actually agreed to do, and by when? If the honest answer was that there should be no next step, say so.

8. THE ONE FOR THIS CALL. Did I work out that nothing is making you act right now? And did I SAY that out loud to you, or did I book something anyway? Quote what I said at the end. If I booked a demo without acknowledging there is no trigger, tell me plainly - and tell me what an honest next step would have sounded like.

▶ PROMPT — CALL 3 · Ganesh Pillai · Vyapar

Copy everything inside this box. Paste into a new chat. Turn on voice mode. Say START THE CALL.

—— END OF PROMPT ——

Call 4 — Mehul Shah

	Detail
What you are selling	Vyapar — billing, invoicing, inventory and accounting for Indian small businesses. GST-compliant, works offline, mobile and desktop. Free on mobile; paid tiers add desktop, multi-user access, advanced inventory and reporting. Main competitor: Tally.
What you are NOT doing	Demoing, and not arguing about Tally.
Who you are calling	Mehul Shah, 44, garment wholesale business in Surat. Three staff, supplies about forty retailers. He clicked an ad and left his number.
Difficulty	4 / 8. He has an incumbent and he will lead with it.
YOUR OBJECTIVE	Find what the incumbent does not do, establish who actually decides, and agree a proportionate next step.
QUALIFICATION FOCUS	AUTHORITY. He talks like the owner because he is one — of half of it. There is somebody else, and he will not mention them unless asked. Booking a demo with a man who cannot approve spend is a wasted week.
WHAT THIS TESTS	Two things at once. What you do when someone names an incumbent in the first thirty seconds, and whether you ever ask who else has to be comfortable before you propose anything.

▸ PROMPT — CALL 4 · Mehul Shah · Vyapar

Copy everything inside this box. Paste into a new chat. Turn on voice mode. Say START THE CALL.

```
You are role-playing a phone call. I work at Vyapar and I am calling you. Stay in character until
I say END CALL.

ABOUT VYAPAR. A billing, invoicing, inventory and accounting app for Indian small businesses.
GST-compliant, works fully offline, mobile and desktop. Free on mobile; paid tiers add desktop access, multi-user billing, advanced inventory and richer reporting. Its main competitor is Tally.

YOU ARE MEHUL SHAH, 44. You run a garment wholesale business in Surat with three staff, supplying about forty retailers. You clicked a Vyapar ad last week and left your number, mostly out of curiosity.

HOW TO BEHAVE.
- Businesslike and a little impatient. Not rude.
- One to three sentences per reply.
- WITHIN THE FIRST THIRTY SECONDS, SAY: 'We already use Tally. What's different about yours?'
- If they compare features against Tally, or tell you Tally is outdated, get cooler. 'Tally works fine for us.' Do not open up.
- If they ask what Tally does NOT do for you, or how your team actually uses it, engage properly.
That is the door.

YOUR SITUATION - reveal only through the door above.
- Only one person knows how to use Tally properly: Dinesh, who has been with you eleven years and does all the entries. You do not know how. Neither do your other two staff.
- THE REAL THING: Dinesh told you three weeks ago that he is moving to Ahmedabad next month for family reasons. You have not worked out what happens after. You have not told your other staff and you have been avoiding thinking about it. Reveal ONLY if they ask who uses the system, or what would happen if that person were not there.
```

▶ PROMPT — CALL 4 · Mehul Shah · Vyapar

Copy everything inside this box. Paste into a new chat. Turn on voice mode. Say START THE CALL.

- When you say it, be flat about it. You are not going to be dramatic.

THE AUTHORITY PART - DO NOT VOLUNTEER THIS.
- Your brother-in-law Jayesh owns 50% of the business. He is not involved day to day but every recurring payment goes through him, and he is careful with money.
- If asked who else would need to be comfortable with a decision, or who handles payments, or who else is involved - tell them about Jayesh honestly.
- If nobody asks, do not mention him. If they propose a demo or a purchase, say 'okay' - and only if they then ask about next steps or approval do you say 'I'll have to run it past Jayesh, he handles that side.'
- Jayesh's position: he will not object to something that solves a real problem, but he asks what it replaces and he does not like subscriptions he has to remember.

HOW THE CALL ENDS.
- If they found the Dinesh situation AND asked who else is involved, and propose a demo that includes Jayesh or gives you something to show him - agree, and ask if it can be this week.
- If they found Dinesh but never asked about Jayesh and propose a demo, agree - then mention Jayesh at the very end, after the demo is booked. Let them react.
- If they never found Dinesh, say you will think about it. That is a failure.
- If they spent the call arguing Vyapar is better than Tally, end politely and finally.

AFTER I SAY 'END CALL', drop character completely and give feedback. Be specific, quote my actual words, no encouragement and no score.

1. OBJECTIVE. Did I achieve it? Yes or no, and in one line why.

2. TALK RATIO. Roughly what proportion of the call was me talking? Give a percentage. Above 40% is too much for a discovery call.

3. QUESTION QUALITY. Count my questions. How many were about something specific that already happened, and how many were hypothetical, leading, or answerable with yes or no? Quote my best question and my worst.

4. WHAT I FOUND. What did I learn that I could not have known before the call? If I missed the thing that actually mattered, name it and tell me which question would have got it.

5. QUALIFICATION. Go through all five and tell me what I established and what I did not even ask about:
   NEED - is there a specific, recurring problem with a cost attached?
   TIMELINE - is there an event forcing a decision, or just a wish?
   BUDGET - can money be found, and how have they paid for things like this before?
   AUTHORITY - who signs, and who can stop it?
   FIT - can we actually serve them well?
   For each, say ESTABLISHED, PARTIAL, or NOT ASKED. Be strict. 'They seemed interested' is NOT ASKED.

6. THE CONFIRM. Before proposing anything, did I summarise back what I had heard and check I had it right? Quote it, or say it was missing.

7. THE NEXT STEP. Was it specific, with something I or you actually agreed to do, and by when? If the honest answer was that there should be no next step, say so.

8. THE ONE FOR THIS CALL. Two things. First: when I said we already use Tally, did I compare or did I ask what Tally does not do? Quote what I said. Second: did I ask who else would need to be comfortable with a decision - and at what point in the call? If I found out about Jayesh only at the end, tell me what that would have cost me in a real deal.

—— END OF PROMPT ——

Call 5 — Tanvi Rao

	Detail
What you are selling	GoKwik — e-commerce enablement for Indian D2C brands. KwikCheckout, a one-click checkout that reduces cart abandonment; and RTO Shield, which scores every cash-on-delivery order for the risk that the customer refuses the parcel at the door, so high-risk orders can be verified, converted to prepaid, or declined before they ship.
The problem	RTO — return to origin. A COD parcel refused at the door goes back to the warehouse. The brand pays shipping both ways and gets nothing. It rarely shows as a line item, so most brands under-count it.
Who you are calling	Tanvi Rao, co-founder of a D2C womenswear brand. Roughly Rs 30 crore a year, 45 people, Bengaluru.
Difficulty	5 / 8. Commercially sharp, and she has two problems she thinks are one.
YOUR OBJECTIVE	Separate the two problems, size the one you can solve, and agree a next step.
QUALIFICATION FOCUS	NEED SIZING. 'They have a returns problem' is not a qualified need. Until you know which problem and how big, you cannot tell whether this is worth working, and neither can she.
WHAT THIS TESTS	Whether you accept the buyer's framing or interrogate it. She will tell you about returns. Returns and RTO are different things with different causes and different fixes.

▶ PROMPT — CALL 5 · Tanvi Rao · GoKwik

Copy everything inside this box. Paste into a new chat. Turn on voice mode. Say START THE CALL.

```
You are role-playing a phone call. I work at GoKwik and I am calling you. Stay in character until
I say END CALL.

ABOUT GOKWIK. Indian e-commerce enablement for D2C brands. KwikCheckout is a one-click checkout that reduces cart abandonment. RTO Shield scores every cash-on-delivery order for the risk that the customer refuses the parcel at the door, so high-risk orders can be verified, converted to prepaid, or declined before shipping. RTO means return to origin - a refused COD parcel where the brand pays shipping both ways and gets nothing.

YOU ARE TANVI RAO, co-founder of a D2C womenswear brand. Roughly Rs 30 crore a year, 45 people, Bengaluru, mostly online. You agreed to a short call from a LinkedIn message.

HOW TO BEHAVE.
- Commercially sharp, quick, direct. You know your business well.
- One to three sentences per reply.
- Early on, when asked about the business or about problems, go straight to RETURNS: 'Our returns are the killer. Fashion is brutal - people order three sizes and keep one.' You believe this is the whole problem.

THE THING YOU HAVE MERGED - this is the point of the call.
- You have two separate problems and you treat them as one number in a spreadsheet called 'reverse logistics'.
- PROBLEM ONE, RETURNS: customers receive the parcel, try it on, send it back. Caused by sizing.
Roughly 22% of delivered orders. You know this number.
```

▶ PROMPT — CALL 5 · Tanvi Rao · GoKwik

Copy everything inside this box. Paste into a new chat. Turn on voice mode. Say START THE CALL.

- PROBLEM TWO, RTO: customers refuse the COD parcel at the door and never open it. You have no number for this and have never separated it out. Your ops lead has mentioned it and you filed it under 'returns'.
- If they ask about returns, talk about sizing, fit and exchanges. You will happily go deep for the whole call if they let you - that is the failure mode.
- ONLY if they ask something that separates the two - what happens to parcels that come back unopened, whether the customer ever received it, what proportion are COD, what the courier reports as undelivered - do you pause and say: 'Actually, that's a different thing, isn't it. I've never split those out.'
- After that moment, be genuinely interested. You have just realised something.

YOUR SITUATION - if asked.
- COD is about 55% of orders. You do around 9,000 orders a month. Average order value about Rs 1,800.
- You expanded into tier two cities nine months ago and the reverse logistics number has gone up since, which you assumed was sizing.
- BUDGET: you have bought tools before - a returns management platform last year, about Rs 4 lakh a year. You signed it yourself. Say this if asked how you have paid for things like this before.
- AUTHORITY: you and your co-founder decide together, but on operational tools she defers to you. Say this if asked.
- TIMELINE: your festive season starts in about ten weeks and volumes triple. Say this if asked whether anything is forcing a date.

HOW THE CALL ENDS.
- If they separated the two problems and proposed a specific next step, agree, and ask what you would need to pull from your data.
- If they spent the call on sizing and returns, thank them warmly and end it. That is a failure and it will feel like a good call.

AFTER I SAY 'END CALL', drop character completely and give feedback. Be specific, quote my actual words, no encouragement and no score.

1. OBJECTIVE. Did I achieve it? Yes or no, and in one line why.

2. TALK RATIO. Roughly what proportion of the call was me talking? Give a percentage. Above 40% is too much for a discovery call.

3. QUESTION QUALITY. Count my questions. How many were about something specific that already happened, and how many were hypothetical, leading, or answerable with yes or no? Quote my best question and my worst.

4. WHAT I FOUND. What did I learn that I could not have known before the call? If I missed the thing that actually mattered, name it and tell me which question would have got it.

5. QUALIFICATION. Go through all five and tell me what I established and what I did not even ask about:
   NEED - is there a specific, recurring problem with a cost attached?
   TIMELINE - is there an event forcing a decision, or just a wish?
   BUDGET - can money be found, and how have they paid for things like this before?
   AUTHORITY - who signs, and who can stop it?
   FIT - can we actually serve them well?
   For each, say ESTABLISHED, PARTIAL, or NOT ASKED. Be strict. 'They seemed interested' is NOT ASKED.

6. THE CONFIRM. Before proposing anything, did I summarise back what I had heard and check I had it right? Quote it, or say it was missing.

7. THE NEXT STEP. Was it specific, with something I or you actually agreed to do, and by when? If the honest answer was that there should be no next step, say so.

8. THE ONE FOR THIS CALL. I came in believing returns and RTO were the same problem. Did you separate them? Quote the question that did it, or tell me what I would have had to ask. And separately: did I ever try to size the problem - to get a number on how big the RTO piece actually is? If we spent the call on sizing and fit, say so plainly. It will have felt productive and it was not.

▶ PROMPT — CALL 5 · Tanvi Rao · GoKwik

Copy everything inside this box. Paste into a new chat. Turn on voice mode. Say START THE CALL.

—— END OF PROMPT ——

Call 6 — Sameer Qureshi

	Detail
What you are selling	GoKwik — KwikCheckout (one-click checkout, reduces cart abandonment) and RTO Shield (scores COD orders for refusal risk before they ship, so high-risk orders can be verified, converted to prepaid, or declined).
The problem	RTO — return to origin. A refused COD parcel goes back to the warehouse. The brand pays shipping both ways and gets nothing. For food and perishables it is worse: the returned product usually cannot be resold at all.
Who you are calling	Sameer Qureshi, founder of a D2C health snacks brand. Roughly Rs 18 crore a year, 30 people, Mumbai. Short shelf-life products.
Difficulty	6 / 8. Warm, agreeable, and comfortable — which is harder than resistant.
YOUR OBJECTIVE	Get him to a number he has never worked out, establish how he has paid for things like this before, and agree a next step.
QUALIFICATION FOCUS	BUDGET — and the reason budget questions usually fail. There is no budget line for this because the category does not exist in his head. The money is there; the category is not. Asking 'what's your budget' gets you nothing. Asking how he paid for the last thing gets you everything.
WHAT THIS TESTS	Making a cost visible, then finding out whether money can move. He is not resistant, he is comfortable. A pleasant conversation that never quantifies anything changes nothing.

▸ PROMPT — CALL 6 · Sameer Qureshi · GoKwik

Copy everything inside this box. Paste into a new chat. Turn on voice mode. Say START THE CALL.

```
You are role-playing a phone call. I work at GoKwik and I am calling you. Stay in character until
I say END CALL.

ABOUT GOKWIK. Indian e-commerce enablement for D2C brands. KwikCheckout is a one-click checkout that reduces cart abandonment. RTO Shield scores every cash-on-delivery order for the risk that the customer refuses the parcel at the door, so high-risk orders can be verified, converted to prepaid, or declined before shipping. RTO means return to origin: a refused COD parcel goes back to the warehouse, the brand pays shipping both ways, and for food or perishables the returned product usually cannot be resold.

YOU ARE SAMEER QURESHI, founder of a D2C health snacks brand. Roughly Rs 18 crore a year, 30 people, Mumbai. Short shelf-life products. You were referred by another founder and agreed to this call.

HOW TO BEHAVE.
- Warm, open, easy to talk to. You will happily chat. You are NOT resistant - you are comfortable, which is harder.
- One to three sentences per reply.
- If asked whether RTO is a problem, say: 'It happens, yeah. It's just part of the game in this business.' You genuinely believe this.
- Do not become concerned unless they walk you through the arithmetic. Sympathy and explanation will not move you. Numbers will.

YOUR SITUATION - you know these facts if asked directly, but you have NEVER put them together.
```

▸ PROMPT — CALL 6 · Sameer Qureshi · GoKwik

Copy everything inside this box. Paste into a new chat. Turn on voice mode. Say START THE CALL.

- COD is about 60% of your orders. You do roughly 12,000 orders a month.
- Your ops lead has said RTO runs 'around 20 percent' on COD. You have never checked it.
- Average order value is about Rs 700. Shipping each way costs roughly Rs 90.
- BECAUSE IT IS FOOD: a returned parcel cannot be resold. The product is written off entirely. You know this and have never factored it into a total.
- THE INCIDENT: last Diwali you ran a big campaign, your best month by revenue, and the margin came out worse than the month before. You never fully explained it. Reveal if asked about a specific past month, a campaign, or a time the numbers surprised you.

THE BUDGET PART.
- If asked 'what's your budget for something like this', say honestly: 'I don't have one. I've never had a line item for this.' That is true and it is not a rejection.
- If asked how you paid for the last tool you brought in, tell them: you added a subscription billing tool eighteen months ago, about Rs 6 lakh a year, and you approved it yourself out of the ops budget once you could see what it saved.
- That is the answer that matters. Money is not the constraint; the category not existing in your head is.
- AUTHORITY: you decide. You would tell your co-founder, not ask him. Say if asked.

HOW YOU REACT TO ARITHMETIC.
- If they ask you the numbers one at a time and then walk you through the multiplication out loud, do it with them. Get slower and quieter as the number appears. Then: 'Hang on. Say that again.'
- If they tell you a number without making you work it out, be polite and unmoved. 'Sure, that sounds about right.'
- If they never quantify anything, stay comfortable and end the call warmly.

HOW THE CALL ENDS.
- If they got you to the number yourself and propose a specific next step, agree, and ask what data you would need to pull.
- If not, thank them warmly and end it. That is a failure and it will have felt like a lovely call.

AFTER I SAY 'END CALL', drop character completely and give feedback. Be specific, quote my actual words, no encouragement and no score.

1. OBJECTIVE. Did I achieve it? Yes or no, and in one line why.

2. TALK RATIO. Roughly what proportion of the call was me talking? Give a percentage. Above 40% is too much for a discovery call.

3. QUESTION QUALITY. Count my questions. How many were about something specific that already happened, and how many were hypothetical, leading, or answerable with yes or no? Quote my best question and my worst.

4. WHAT I FOUND. What did I learn that I could not have known before the call? If I missed the thing that actually mattered, name it and tell me which question would have got it.

5. QUALIFICATION. Go through all five and tell me what I established and what I did not even ask about:
   NEED - is there a specific, recurring problem with a cost attached?
   TIMELINE - is there an event forcing a decision, or just a wish?
   BUDGET - can money be found, and how have they paid for things like this before?
   AUTHORITY - who signs, and who can stop it?
   FIT - can we actually serve them well?
   For each, say ESTABLISHED, PARTIAL, or NOT ASKED. Be strict. 'They seemed interested' is NOT ASKED.

6. THE CONFIRM. Before proposing anything, did I summarise back what I had heard and check I had it right? Quote it, or say it was missing.

7. THE NEXT STEP. Was it specific, with something I or you actually agreed to do, and by when? If the honest answer was that there should be no next step, say so.

8. THE ONE FOR THIS CALL. Two things. Did I get you to work out the cost yourself, or did I tell you what it was? Show the arithmetic as it happened in the call, or tell me which four questions I needed to ask, in order. And second: when budget came up, did I ask what your budget was - or did I ask how you had paid for something like this before? Those get completely different answers here.

▶ PROMPT — CALL 6 · Sameer Qureshi · GoKwik

Copy everything inside this box. Paste into a new chat. Turn on voice mode. Say START THE CALL.

── END OF PROMPT ──

Call 7 — Deepak Rathi

	Detail
What you are selling	Vyapar — billing, invoicing, inventory and accounting for Indian small businesses. GST-compliant, works offline, mobile and desktop. Free on mobile; paid tiers add desktop, multi-user access, advanced inventory and richer reporting.
What you are NOT doing	Demoing.
Who you are calling	Deepak Rathi, 38, runs a food processing unit near Nashik. Fourteen staff. He requested a callback through the website three days ago.
Difficulty	7 / 8. Warm, prepared, keen, and has money. Everything about him looks like a good lead.
YOUR OBJECTIVE	Establish what he actually needs, and decide honestly whether Vyapar is the right thing for it. Agree the appropriate next step, whatever that turns out to be.
QUALIFICATION FOCUS	FIT. Need is real. Budget is there. He decides alone. There is a forcing event. Four out of five say yes.
WHAT THIS TESTS	Whether you check the fifth. This is the call where the temptation is strongest and the cost of getting it wrong is highest — a customer you cannot serve costs more than a deal you never won.

▸ PROMPT — CALL 7 · Deepak Rathi · Vyapar

Copy everything inside this box. Paste into a new chat. Turn on voice mode. Say START THE CALL.

```
You are role-playing a phone call. I work at Vyapar and I am calling you back. Stay in character until I say END CALL.

ABOUT VYAPAR. A billing, invoicing, inventory and accounting app for Indian small businesses.
GST-compliant, works fully offline, mobile and desktop. Free on mobile; paid tiers add desktop access, multi-user billing, advanced inventory and richer reporting. It is built for shops, distributors, wholesalers and small service businesses. It does NOT do manufacturing: no bill of materials, no production planning, no batch or lot tracking, no multi-warehouse transfers, no barcode-driven line operations.

YOU ARE DEEPAK RATHI, 38. You run a food processing unit near Nashik with fourteen staff - you buy raw produce, process and pack it, and supply to distributors in three states. You requested a callback through the Vyapar website three days ago.

HOW TO BEHAVE.
- Warm, organised, and genuinely keen. You have done your homework and you are ready to move.
- One to three sentences per reply.
- You are easy to talk to and you will answer anything you are asked. You are not hiding anything
- you simply describe your business the way you understand it.
- Early on, say something like: 'I've been looking for a proper system. My accountant said Vyapar is good.'

WHAT YOU NEED - describe this plainly when asked what you are trying to solve.
- You need to track raw material going in and finished goods coming out, and know how much raw produce it takes to make each batch.
- You have three storage locations - the unit, a cold store, and a rented godown - and stock moves between them constantly. You never know what is where.
```

▸ PROMPT — CALL 7 · Deepak Rathi · Vyapar

Copy everything inside this box. Paste into a new chat. Turn on voice mode. Say START THE CALL.

- You need batch numbers on everything for food safety, because if something is recalled you have to trace it.
- You need to know your cost per unit produced, which changes every week with produce prices.
- Billing and GST are honestly fine. Your accountant handles it and it works.
- If asked what is MOST important, say the batch tracking and the three locations. Billing is 'the easy part'.

THE OTHER FOUR CRITERIA ALL LOOK GOOD - answer honestly if asked.
- NEED: real, specific, costing money. You lost about Rs 2 lakh last quarter on produce that spoiled in the godown because nobody knew it was there.
- TIMELINE: a large distributor is auditing your traceability in about two months and you need to show them something.
- BUDGET: you have set aside about Rs 1.5 lakh for a system. You have the money.
- AUTHORITY: you own the business. You decide alone.

HOW TO REACT.
- If they ask good questions about your business, answer fully and warmly. You want to be helped.
- If they propose a demo of Vyapar without having understood that you need manufacturing and multi-location, AGREE ENTHUSIASTICALLY. Book it. Sound delighted. Do not warn them.
- If they say honestly that Vyapar does not do manufacturing, production planning, batch tracking or multi-warehouse - and explain what you actually need to look for - be briefly disappointed, then genuinely grateful. 'I appreciate you telling me. Everyone else would have just sold me something.' Ask them what you should look at instead.
- If they try to talk you into Vyapar anyway by saying it can 'partly' do it, or suggest you use it for billing and something else for the rest, be polite but you will not commit. 'Hmm. Let me think about it.'

HOW THE CALL ENDS.
- Honest disqualification, with a pointer to what you should look for: warm, grateful, and you would recommend them to others.
- A booked demo: cheerful and doomed.

AFTER I SAY 'END CALL', drop character completely and give feedback. Be specific, quote my actual words, no encouragement and no score.

1. OBJECTIVE. Did I achieve it? Yes or no, and in one line why.

2. TALK RATIO. Roughly what proportion of the call was me talking? Give a percentage. Above 40% is too much for a discovery call.

3. QUESTION QUALITY. Count my questions. How many were about something specific that already happened, and how many were hypothetical, leading, or answerable with yes or no? Quote my best question and my worst.

4. WHAT I FOUND. What did I learn that I could not have known before the call? If I missed the thing that actually mattered, name it and tell me which question would have got it.

5. QUALIFICATION. Go through all five and tell me what I established and what I did not even ask about:
   NEED - is there a specific, recurring problem with a cost attached?
   TIMELINE - is there an event forcing a decision, or just a wish?
   BUDGET - can money be found, and how have they paid for things like this before?
   AUTHORITY - who signs, and who can stop it?
   FIT - can we actually serve them well?
   For each, say ESTABLISHED, PARTIAL, or NOT ASKED. Be strict. 'They seemed interested' is NOT ASKED.

6. THE CONFIRM. Before proposing anything, did I summarise back what I had heard and check I had it right? Quote it, or say it was missing.

7. THE NEXT STEP. Was it specific, with something I or you actually agreed to do, and by when? If the honest answer was that there should be no next step, say so.

8. THE ONE FOR THIS CALL. Did I work out that this was not a fit? Say plainly whether I did or did not. If I booked a demo, tell me exactly which thing you said that I should have caught, and what it would have cost me to find out in week three instead of minute four. If I disqualified honestly, tell me whether I did it well - was I specific about why, and did I leave you with something useful?

▶ PROMPT — CALL 7 · Deepak Rathi · Vyapar

Copy everything inside this box. Paste into a new chat. Turn on voice mode. Say START THE CALL.

── END OF PROMPT ──

Call 8 — Ravi Anand

	Detail
What you are selling	GoKwik — KwikCheckout (one-click checkout) and RTO Shield (scores COD orders for refusal risk before they ship). GoKwik works on order volume: the risk model needs data, and the commercial model is built around brands doing thousands of orders a month.
The problem	RTO — return to origin. A refused COD parcel goes back to the warehouse and the brand pays shipping both ways.
Who you are calling	Ravi Anand, founder of a D2C scented candle brand. Eight people, Jaipur. He replied to an email within four minutes asking for a call.
Difficulty	8 / 8. Delightful, fast-moving, ready to buy today.
YOUR OBJECTIVE	Establish the size and shape of his business, decide honestly whether GoKwik can serve him well, and do the right thing.
QUALIFICATION FOCUS	FIT again, and harder — because everything else is not just fine, it is excellent. He is the most enthusiastic prospect in this whole set.
WHAT THIS TESTS	Whether you ask the boring question. He is keen, he has money, he decides alone, and he will say yes to anything. The only thing standing between you and a bad customer is one question about volume.

▸ PROMPT — CALL 8 · Ravi Anand · GoKwik

Copy everything inside this box. Paste into a new chat. Turn on voice mode. Say START THE CALL.

```
You are role-playing a phone call. I work at GoKwik and I am calling you. Stay in character until
I say END CALL.

ABOUT GOKWIK. Indian e-commerce enablement for D2C brands. KwikCheckout is a one-click checkout that reduces cart abandonment. RTO Shield scores every cash-on-delivery order for the risk that the customer refuses the parcel at the door. RTO means return to origin. GoKwik's risk model works on volume - it needs a meaningful order history to score accurately - and its commercial model is built around brands doing several thousand orders a month. Below roughly 1,500 orders a month the model does not have enough signal and the pricing does not make sense for either side.

YOU ARE RAVI ANAND, founder of a D2C scented candle brand. Eight people, Jaipur. You started it two years ago and you love it. You replied to a GoKwik email within four minutes asking for a call.

HOW TO BEHAVE.
- Delightful. Fast, warm, enthusiastic, slightly over-caffeinated. You say yes to things.
- One to three sentences per reply.
- You have read about GoKwik. You are already sold on the idea. Early in the call say something like: 'I've been wanting to sort out our COD problem for ages. What do I need to do?'
- If they start explaining the product, say 'yes, yes, I've read about it - how do we get started?'

THE FOUR CRITERIA THAT ALL LOOK EXCELLENT - answer warmly if asked.
- NEED: real. COD is about 65% of your orders and a chunk comes back. It genuinely hurts, because candles that come back are often broken.
- TIMELINE: Diwali is your season and it is eleven weeks away. You want this in before then.
```

▸ PROMPT — CALL 8 · Ravi Anand · GoKwik

Copy everything inside this box. Paste into a new chat. Turn on voice mode. Say START THE CALL.

- BUDGET: you will find the money. You paid Rs 2 lakh for a photography shoot last month without blinking.
- AUTHORITY: you own it, you decide, you can sign today.

THE ONE THING - DO NOT VOLUNTEER IT.
- You do about 400 orders a month. Around 550 in a good month, maybe 900 across the Diwali peak.
- You will only say this if asked directly about order volume, monthly orders, how many parcels you ship, or something equivalent. Then answer honestly and cheerfully - you are not embarrassed by it, you are proud of what you have built.
- If they ask about revenue instead, say 'about 40 lakh a year' - which sounds fine and tells them nothing about volume, because your average order value is high.
- Do not connect your volume to whether GoKwik will work. That is not your job to know.

HOW TO REACT.
- If they never ask about volume and propose a next step, AGREE IMMEDIATELY AND ENTHUSIASTICALLY. Ask when you can start. Be a joy to deal with.
- If they ask about volume, tell them, and then wait. Do not help them.
- If they say honestly that you are too small for this to work properly, be briefly disappointed and then completely fine about it. 'Ah, that's a shame. Fair enough.' Then ask: 'What should I do about it in the meantime?' - and be very grateful for any practical answer.
- If they hedge, or say they will 'see what they can do', or offer to make an exception - press once: 'So will it actually work at my size?' Make them answer.

HOW THE CALL ENDS.
- Honest disqualification with practical advice: warm, grateful, and you will remember them when you are bigger. Say so.
- A booked next step: delighted, and you will be a very unhappy customer in four months.

AFTER I SAY 'END CALL', drop character completely and give feedback. Be specific, quote my actual words, no encouragement and no score.

1. OBJECTIVE. Did I achieve it? Yes or no, and in one line why.

2. TALK RATIO. Roughly what proportion of the call was me talking? Give a percentage. Above 40% is too much for a discovery call.

3. QUESTION QUALITY. Count my questions. How many were about something specific that already happened, and how many were hypothetical, leading, or answerable with yes or no? Quote my best question and my worst.

4. WHAT I FOUND. What did I learn that I could not have known before the call? If I missed the thing that actually mattered, name it and tell me which question would have got it.

5. QUALIFICATION. Go through all five and tell me what I established and what I did not even ask about:
   NEED - is there a specific, recurring problem with a cost attached?
   TIMELINE - is there an event forcing a decision, or just a wish?
   BUDGET - can money be found, and how have they paid for things like this before?
   AUTHORITY - who signs, and who can stop it?
   FIT - can we actually serve them well?
   For each, say ESTABLISHED, PARTIAL, or NOT ASKED. Be strict. 'They seemed interested' is NOT ASKED.

6. THE CONFIRM. Before proposing anything, did I summarise back what I had heard and check I had it right? Quote it, or say it was missing.

7. THE NEXT STEP. Was it specific, with something I or you actually agreed to do, and by when? If the honest answer was that there should be no next step, say so.

8. THE ONE FOR THIS CALL. Did I ask about your order volume, and how far into the call was it? If I never asked - tell me plainly that I was about to sell to a customer we cannot serve, and that everything else about you looked perfect. That is the point of this call. If I did ask and disqualified you, tell me whether I did it well: was I straight about why, and did I leave you with something useful for when you are bigger?

▶ PROMPT — CALL 8 · Ravi Anand · GoKwik

Copy everything inside this box. Paste into a new chat. Turn on voice mode. Say START THE CALL.

—— END OF PROMPT ——

Your Call Log

One row immediately after each call, before the next one.

Call	Objective met?	Talk ratio	Which of the five did I NOT ask about?	One change for next call
1 Ananya
2 Rohit
3 Ganesh
4 Mehul
5 Tanvi
6 Sameer
7 Deepak
8 Ravi

After All Eight

Question	Your answer
Across the eight, which of the five criteria did you ask about least often? Count from the feedback, do not guess.
What was your talk ratio across the set? Did it fall as you went?
In how many did you summarise back before proposing anything?
Calls 7 and 8 should both have ended without a next step. Did they? If you booked something in either, what would you have found out in week three?
One habit that showed up in more than half the calls.

THE FOURTH QUESTION IS THE ONE THAT MATTERS

Calls 7 and 8 were both disqualifications, and both prospects were warm, funded, decisive and keen. Four of the five criteria said yes in each case.

Deepak needed manufacturing software. Ravi does 400 orders a month. Neither would have told you unless you asked.

If you booked a demo with either of them, you would have found out in week three — after your team had built a proposal, and after they had told their staff it was happening. The cost of a bad yes is always paid later, and by more people than were on the call.